STATE REFORMATORY BOARD. Injor Spencer of materbury, Describes

Directors' Visit 1: Elmira. Meriden, Aug. 21.-Walter Hubbard and the other directors of the Connectiout state reformatory board have reurned from their visit to Elmira, N. Y. where they went to inspect the New York state reformatory, which is located just outside of that city. Mr. Hubbard, however, has not yet got home to Meriden. One of the directors, Major Frederick A. Spencer of Waterbury, has been interviewed by a Republican re orter of this city, to whom he said:

"We reached Elmira in time to be resent at the regular Sunday exercises of the reformatory. In the morning were present who were not excused for ome sufficient reason. In the evening Professor McCook of Trinity college president of our board, made an address fore all the inmates of the reformaory. It was really a sermon without notes. All the Sunday exercises which saw were conducted in a most fitting manner and were calculated to impress the minds of the young men who were present with moral and religious truths.

"The location of the reformatory is 'n a peculiarly desirable spot. The valley of the Chemung river, of which Elmira is the largest city, is one of the most beautiful parts of the country it has ver been my privilege to see. The re ormatory, being located some little distance outside the city, has the advan-tage of being surrounded by an abundance of arable land, where ample opportunity is afforded to give the in nates of the institution outdoor life. "We spent the larger part of our stav n observing the routine life of the institution, trying to gain as many ideas as he future. "We found Mr.Brockway a very pleas ant, mild-mannered, blue-eyed man, who showed us every attention during our stay that we could have desired. noticed that the inmates of the Institu ion seemed to be a very healthy body of men. Out of the 1,300 inmates only fourteen were in the hospital.

possible which might be of use to us in

"There is a very finely equipped gym nasium in connection with the institution. It has a swimming tank and all the different kind of baths. It is as well equipped as any gymnasium I ever saw There are all kinds of trade schools where the young men are taught the plasterer's, the carpenter's, the bricklayer's, the stonecutter's, the joiner's the blacksmith's and the machinist's trades, as well as stenography, type writing, telegraphy and numerous othranches of industry. In fact, it would be easier to enumerate what they do not teach than what they do. They also give the inmates an opportunity to stu dy in any branch of book learning which they may choose. I was especially im pressed with the excellence of their m! itary company. The sil nt manual which was gone through with by a body of 1, 000 men-as big as two C. N. G. regiments-was as near perfection as any military drilling I ever saw. The soldiers carry guns a little higher than those carried in our companies. The guns for obvious reasons are not equip

"The inmates of the institution are divided into three grades or classes, which are widely distinguished by costume and privileges. A man when he goes there is put in the middle class. By obedience, faithful and industrious work and good behavior he may very soon be promoted to the highest class, where a great of freedom and privilege is allowed; or he may be debased to the owest class, if he proves incorrigible Here the discipline is strict and severe and the man is made to feel to a greater degree that he is a prisoner. It must be borne in mind that the sentences are indeterminate, and that the period of a man's detention at the reformatory denends largely on himself. The system of marking is made use of in the disci-

line of the institution. "I can say that I was very favorably mpressed with that part of the institunot show us the methods or means of unishment. We saw nothing of the paddle. As far as we saw the instituion it seemed perfect.

"With the $50,000 which the state legslature has put at the disposal of the reformatory directors we cannot think of founding an institution which would be of the service to Connecticut which the Elmira reformatory is to New York We cannot build an adequate building for that amount, aside from equipping t. Its location, too, is a very import ant question. We should want to have in a healthy place, central, well drained, with a good quality and quantity of water and with plenty of arable land. We shall visit the Massachusetts reformatory at Concord and other similar institutions before very long. We conider that we gained valuable and use ful information on our Elmira trip."
